

Published based on Another Airline Bites The Dust

Another Airline Bites The Dust

The airline industry does not seem to be doing that well at the moment and it would seem another low blow has come and this is not good for many people out there. this time it is about the travel company Kiss Flights and it comes as they are ceased to trade, truly terrible news and not something that people really wanted to happen. So how has this happened and what are the people that have already booked with them going to do now?

How It Happened

The main reason it would seem that this company has fallen victim to losing out is because of the ash cloud earlier in the year. Now this had a massive effect on the bigger aviation companies like Virgin and BA can you even imagine the kinds of effects it had on the smaller companies that rely on the flights they have to get by each year. the cloud interfered with things for quite a long period of time which meant that companies were falling into debt very quickly with no way out of it and this is when it gets hard for a company like this to make a recovery.

What Can People Do

Besides going to something like Torquay hotels or a nice spa breaks If you have booked through this company already you should be protected through ATOL so in actual fact you might and should be able to get your money back which is always good, if you are already on holiday the travel authorities have promised to fly you back on time so do not worry about coming back early. Although it might be too late to rebook flights now it could be the perfect time to do that work on the house or because book one of those Christmas holidays in advance.

Whatever happens I hope that it all turns out okay for you!

You can also find this article published on Another Airline Bites The Dust, and on the tag pages Airline, ash cloud, aviation companies, Bites, time, travel authorities.