Paradise for golfers

Question any golfing addict on the perfect spot to play a few holes, and it's likely there will be several factors he considers. The surrounding scenery is important, but mostly a golfer will be concerned with how the course plays - the quality of the greens, the length of the rough, the location of bunkers and hazards. Naturally the course should be difficult, without being overly challenging to play!

The next priority, and one that is just as important as the quality of the course, is the weather. Perfect golfing conditions are not perfectly still, but offer some wind whilst still being pleasant to play in. No golfer likes to play in strong winds and driving rain, particularly if they are struggling with their game at the same time.

Thirdly, the quality of the facilities are also very important. Having good companions and a comfortable refuge to retreat to after a long round are essential to the reputation of a good golf club, which should also offer good quality refreshments. Even on a bad day, golfers like to discuss the high and low points about their rounds.

An excellent destination for playing golf in the Algarve area in Portugal. The excellent golf clubs, many situated in easily accessible locations, make the area a golfer's paradise. There is plenty of nightlife and entertainment, and the local restaurants are generally excellent, offering plenty besides just golf.

There are some very good hotels in the region, but many people prefer self-catering. By searching the internet, excellent Algarve holiday accomodation is easy to locate. There are plenty of appartments, which can be searched through quickly and easily according to many different criteria. The more exclusive areas near the marina will come with higher prices, though cheaper properties can be found elsewhere.
