

Published based on Pleasing The Palate - Excursions For The Hungry

Pleasing The Palate - Excursions For The Hungry

Have you ever heard the word gastronomy? Well, it is defined as the art or science of good food and/or eating and you can be sure whether the driving force or just a big part, gastronomy plays a big part in the modern day vacation. A new term, foodie vacations, have become a popular description for vacations planned totally around the opportunity to experience some the best cuisine in the world; but, as you may know, international travel requires a passport. So if obtaining your pasport is something you need to do, you can locate many agencies online and they will provide you quick, secure service.

We begin our foodies destination investigation with a visit to Singapore. While it is halfway around the world, it is not too far to travel if culinary delight is your objective. Known to be the home of some of the finest Asian food in the world, the food delights waiting for you in the cultural hot spot are not limited. Fine foods from France, Italy, China and Malaysia can be enjoyed at any one of the numerous restaurants and cafes the visitor will find in Singapore.

We now travel to Spain and to Barcelona in particular which is also a very popular destination for those seeking to delight their taste buds while vacationing. Food markets can be found in abundance along the Barcelona streets and you will find restaurants presenting some of the most flavorful food in the world. Known for its tapas, this famous Spanish appetizer is as diverse as the creativity of the chef and is a Spanish tradition no matter where you choose to dine. Spanish olive oil can be enjoyed as well as purchased for the trip home. The Pastas Alimenticias bakery and the Mercat de la Boqueria are known around the world as two of the best eatery destinations available.

No foodie vacation list would be complete without listing Avignon, France. The largest percentage of the economy of this town relates to the food industry, both the manufacturing, exporting and, of course, presentation and enjoyment. Wineries, vineyards and restaurants provide the visitor with boundless opportunities to enjoy the tasty meals offered here as well as some of the finest wines worldwide.

Bologna, Italy has to be one of the food capitals of the world. Italian food is definitely my favorite, and nothing beats the authentic spaghetti and pizza from Italy. Fresh markets line the streets and the restaurants feature some of the most delicious Italian food you will ever experience. Bologna is also the birth place of many of our favorite foods, including tasty Bolognese sauce, prosciutto, salami, local wines, and mortadella. While the food is absolutely delicious, Bologna is also a very beautiful place to visit.

These destinations require passports, but as previously mentioned theyre getting so easy to get. Just a few clicks can have your passport on its way. There are a variety of services readily available at your fingertips, such as urgent new passport renewal, passport replacements, or simply getting some more pages for your passport.

Food and vacationing just go together naturally, and why not customize your vacation to include some the dining opportunities listed above? Of course, you cant get there without a passport; so if getting a new passport is what you need, think about visiting passport sites. They will assist you quickly and securely so if you have an urgent United States passport renewal request, or if you just need information about a childs passport, contact an online passport agency today.

You can also find this article published on Pleasing The Palate - Excursions For The Hungry, and on the tag pages avignon france, foodie, home, pastas alimenticias, spanish olive oil, vacation.